MESSAGE

It is heartening to learn about the organisation of the International Conference on Sustainable Energy Transition 2026 in New Delhi. Heartiest congratulations to all the organisers for convening this important international conference and bringing together global leaders, experts and various stakeholders on a topic of shared responsibility.

I extend a warm welcome to all the distinguished participants and delegates, whose presence and insights will enrich the deliberations and strengthen international cooperation in a domain that is crucial for humanity.

The theme of sustainable energy transition is central to addressing climate change, ensuring energy security and building an inclusive future for generations to come. India's approach to sustainability is deeply rooted in its age-old civilisational ethos of living in harmony with nature. This ancient worldview continues to guide India's development pathway, blending economic aspirations with ecological responsibility.

In recent years, India has been the fastest-growing major economy. At the same time, India has also taken decisive steps towards sustainable energy transition. Our solar energy installed capacity has grown by over 40-fold in the last decade. We have also been making excellent gains in wind power, advancing green hydrogen, enhancing energy efficiency and encouraging clean mobility.

Further, India met its Paris Agreement target of achieving 40% of its installed electricity capacity from non-fossil fuel sources by 2021, nine years ahead of the 2030 deadline.

Be it the International Solar Alliance or the Global Biofuels Alliance, India has also been at the forefront of international efforts to promote clean energy. In this respect, it is an important development that the International Conference on Sustainable Energy Transition 2026 is happening in India.

India is keen to share its experiences, as well as learn from the journeys of different nations. I am sure that the conference will host a vibrant exchange of ideas and best practices that can carve out a secure and sustainable future for the planet.

Best wishes for successful deliberations at the Conference.
